Bill Would Change School Finance System

Plans to send to the House floor a bill totally changing Texas' public school finance system flopped Thursday for the third time.

The House Education Committee voted to send the bill back to the same subcommittee that approved it April 18.

Rep. Dan Kubiak, committee chairman and the bill's sponsor, went along with the decision. He voiced disgust, however, at the further delay, which will be at least five days because of a House notice rule and the weekend.

When the bill was presented to the Committee Tuesday, Kubiak held off a vote because he had learned it would force the 1975 legislature to pass a tax bill of about $800 million.

Kubiak showed up at Thursday's meeting with a new version, phasing the bill in over a six-year period instead of three years.

"Our plan, if adopted, would give poor districts more than twice as much money per student and yet cut local taxes in many instances," Kubiak said, "all while keeping control at the local level."

The U. S. Supreme Court upheld Texas' present school finance system but the court case revealed glaring inequities, Kubiak said.

The bill scraps the old "economic index" which has been used to determine each district's wealth and the amount of state aid due. In its place the bill would establish a local tax system based on 100 percent true market value with a tax rate of 25 cents per $100 valuation.

To show what the bill would mean, Kubiak cited the poverty-stricken Edgewood District which started the federal court case: Edgewood, in the latest figures available, raises $35 per year per student locally and gets $350 per year per student from the state -- for a total education outlay of $385 per student.

Under the new bill Edgewood's local taxes could be cut to $32.50 per pupil but state aid would be increased to $967.50 -- giving the district an adequate $1,000 per year per pupil.

Tax valuations would continue to be set by the local board, but they would be subject to review by the State Comptroller who would review thoroughly 20 per cent of all districts every year.

If a wealthier district could raise more than it needed from the 25 cent rate it could either cut taxes or use the money for enrichment. A district which could not support itself from the local rate -- which is true of most districts -- would get its supplemental needs entirely from the state without regard to the old percentage formula used.

The bill also would raise the basic state support per student per year and would raise the enrichment funds the state would give to districts willing to have higher local taxes for enrichment programs.

Area Roundup

IGC Reclamation Featured

ROCKDALE

Reclamation practices on strip mined land as adopted by Industrial Generating Co. several years ago was the subject of a feature story in the April issue of The Progressive Farmer. One of the largest outcroppings of lignite is at Rockdale. For the past 20 years Industrial Generating Co. has been using the lignite as fuel for its generating plant that furnishes electric power for Alcoa's Rockdale Works. The Progressive Farmer story outlines how IGC has been cleaning up the mining scars left by the strip mining process.

Remodeling Contract Let

HEARNE

Robertson County Commissioners Court passed approval on a building contract in the amount of $565,484 for the remodeling and renovation of the courthouse complex. The approval bid is more than $135,000 over the initial estimate figured by the architect. It was only after the contractor and the architect engaged in a whittling session that the final figure was developed and approved.

Suit Filed Over Pay Raise

GATESVILLE

A suit has been filed in district court in Gatesville asking a court mandamus to vacate a commissioners order that pay hikes voted by a salary grievance committee not be paid. The suit was filed in the name of six county officeholders and grievance committee whose petition charges that the commissioners action was "illegal." It was these six who were unanimously voted $50 a month salary increases by the grievance committee last February.

Old School To Come Down

ROSEBUD

At a called meeting of the Rosebud-Lott School Board a Houston firm was awarded the contract for demolition of the old high school building in Rosebud. The contractor will begin work after school is out in May and the job is to be completed by August 17.

Gas Guzzlers Listed

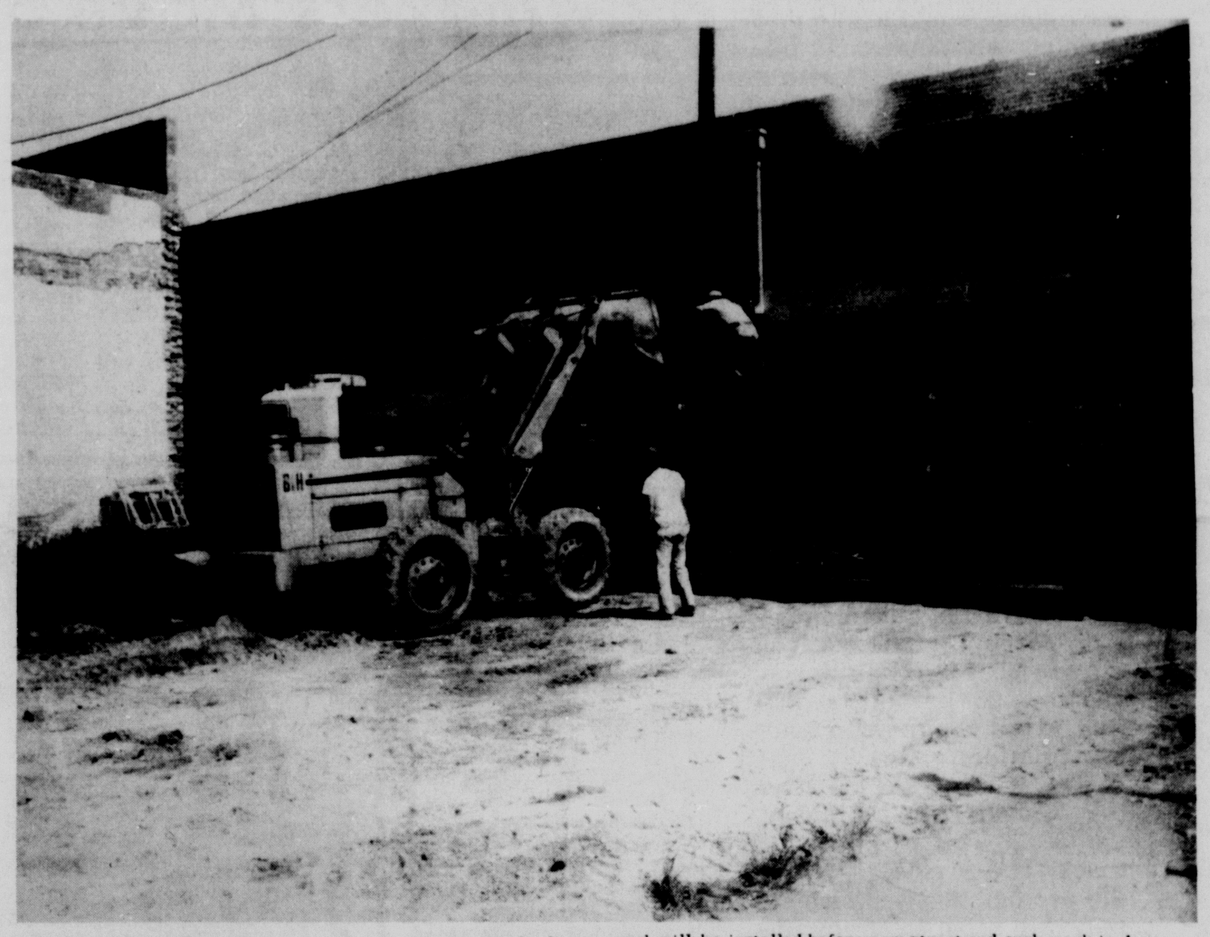
TEMPLE

The Environmental Protection Agency has published a Who's Who of gasoline-guzzlers, rating the miles - per - gallon of every 1973 car model sold in the United States. Datsun's lightest weight models, at 2,000 pounds, turned in the best fuel economy at almost 28 miles per gallon, closely followed by Toyota at 26. Ford's Lincoln-Mercury station wagon and Ford station wagon managed only 8.4 miles per gallon, just a shade better than a Rolls Royce Silver Shadow.

Dams Contain Brazos Storm Water

WACO

The Brazos River was swollen by discharge from area streams, but dams at Lake Whitney and Lake Waco were holding back most of the storm water and preventing catastrophe. Most of the water coming through Waco in the Brazos channel was from the Hackberry Aquilla creeks watershed which flows into the Brazos a few miles upstream. Even with the extra runoff, there was no danger of the river leaving its banks inside Waco.



NEW WATER LINES DUE - City workmen are busy unloading 8-inch steel pipe for installation in the downtown urban renewal area. The new lines will replace old, smaller lines and will be installed before new street and curb work is done. City officials said the new lines will improve fire insurance rates for the city.

Hoffson To Speak Here At Yoe, Rotary

Capt. Arthur Thomas Hoffson, 29, former POW, of Camp Springs, Md., will be in Cameron Tuesday and Wednesday and will speak at Yoe High School and at the Cameron Rotary Club.

Hoffson, grandson of Mrs. John H. Thomas and nephew of Mrs. Make McDermott, will be at Yoe High at 10:30 Tuesday morning and at the Rotary Club Wednesday at noon in The Texan's Western Room.

Capt. Hoffson was shot down in combat over North Vietnam in August, 1968, and was a prisoner of North Vietnam until he was recently returned with the second group of returned prisoners.

Before entering the Air Force Hoffson attended The University of Texas and was a frequent visitor of Cameron.

This will be his third speaking engagement since being returned, having talked first with officers of the Andrews Air Force Base at Washington, D. C. and the Lions Club of Camp Springs.

In 1970-71 the Yoe National Honor Society members worked closely with the League of Families of POWs and MIAs in an effort to insure the return of all prisoners. At that time Hoffson's mother came from Washington to Yoe High and talked to the students.

Mrs. Miller To Head Local Outreach Center

Mrs. Nona Miller has been named director of the Milam County Outreach Center for Mental Health following the resignation of Mrs. Norma Wallace.

Mrs. Miller has been a case worker for the Outreach Center since its opening in September, 1971.

Mrs. Monica Schiller has been appointed as case worker for the Center. She is a graduate of SWTSC and received a masters degree in sociology from Montana State University.

Also on the staff of the county-state supported mental health center are: Dr. Z. M. Josephs, consulting psychiatrist; Dr. Albert Casey, consulting psychologist; R. L. Godsey, assistant to Dr. Casey; and Mrs. Ruby Holliman, secretary.

Hospital Fund Opened For Shooting Victim

A hospital fund has been set up in both local banks for Karen Kurtz, 10-year-old victim of a shooting spree in Houston last week.

The child is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Kurtz of Houston. The grandmother is the former Fannie Zalesky of Milam County.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edison Kurtz, Karen was walking home from school when Larry Casey shot six persons at random including Karen who was shot in the leg.

She is in Hermann Hospital at Houston where doctors fear she may lose her leg.

Milam Farmers Face Uncertainties As Consumers Apply Pressure

By Bill McCutchen
County Agent

In visiting with farmers recently there are many concerns and uncertainties.

The families that till the land and feed livestock realize that they are the target of meat boycotts and homemakers'ire and they also know that the economics of their business is not understood.

The ceiling imposed in late March on retail prices of beef, pork and lamb is not generally viewed as disastrous, just aggravating. It came at a time when prices were at or near peak and probably headed down.

Producers fear that this action won't be enough to please consumers and are fearful that organized labor could apply enough pressure to force a rollback of prices. After all the administration did say "no-way" on a food price freeze.

It's not the farmers fault that food prices are high, but city people don't understand farm problems. I believe that urban Americans want fair incomes for all. The thing they are probably having a hard time coping with is the quick jump in food prices.

The problem has been a gross inequity to the farmer. He hasn't prospered along with the other groups. Only recently he began to get for his crops what he received 20 years ago after a big drop in intervening years while his costs never ceased to climb.

COTTON PROGRAM

Local cotton farmers are concerned over the recommended "phase out" of the cotton program. Cotton in Milam County costs about 26¢/lb to produce and farmers have averaged around 20¢/lb over the past few years. Without a support price either cotton prices must climb or there will be little if any cotton in Milam County.

Never before has the farmer and rancher faced so many uncertainties. He no longer has to worry about just nature but fuel shortages, freezes and farm products, environmentalists, skyrocketing landcosts, boycotts, and loss of farm programs.

Many farmers see the present position as wanting to phase out programs because of better farm prices and at the same time trying to drive prices down by releasing more land for production and creating surpluses.

FUEL SHORTAGE

Fuel shortages are also causing concern. Some Milam County farmers have been told that they can have only the amount of diesel fuel they used in 1972. There were three months of last year when no farm work was done and that work will have to be done this year.

If this rationing holds true farmers may run short of fuel about harvest time. A disaster in the making. Also what about farmers who have bought new tractors and leased more land?

Environmentalists are causing much concern also. Bans on chemical means of controlling coyotes and other predators have caused some alarming losses of farm livestock.

Many effective farm chemicals have been taken off the market sometimes without an effective substitute.

PRICE RESISTANCE

But probably the thing farmers are watching most closely is the consumer prices resistance. Apparently there are really enough irate consumers to make a difference in demand for meat and other products. But consumers if they apply too much pressure may well be able to do what farmers have been unable to do for themselves and that is to unify the various factions.

Up until now there have been too many factions for many large scale farm marketing cooperatives to evolve. The farmer simply takes what is offered for his produce. Enough pressure from consumers may well unify farmers into cooperatives who will control enough of the produce to put a price tag on it.

Amtrak's Texas Chief To Continue Old Route

A new Amtrak timetable which was issued Sunday says the Texas Chief will continue on its old route through McGregor and Temple.

Last February Amtrak, the National Railroad Passenger Corporation, said it planned to change the route of the Texas Chief which runs between Chicago and Houston through McGregor and Temple.

It said on June 10 the Chief would start going through Dallas, Corsicana, Hearne and Bryan on the way to Houston.

Stephen J. Kabala, Amtrak's central region director, said it will be impossible for the Chief to make the route change before September 15.

Built For 'Omission'...

Merits of Central Texas dam construction are apparent in considering the destruction in other parts of the country in historic flooding.

The Mississippi is destroying more than any time in its rampant history. The Trinity is threatening great damage and other rivers throughout the country are inundating boundary areas.

But in Central Texas, the Waco, Belton, Stillhouse Hollow and Whitney dams, to name several, are containing the tide of waters flowing from northwest to southeast and the sea.

Without the lakes, where would thousands of farm acres be? Land is so saturated, any kind of runoff without dams would flood widely.

This suggests that even better control in a rainy year would be developed with the reservoirs at Georgetown and Laneport.

These reservoirs can hold only so much water. The proposed construction, and Laneport being questioned by ecologists, would add to that flood control dimension, beside all the other elements inherent in major water control vestment.

It behooves those zealous to question dam construction properly instituted to take a look at what is not happening to the Central Texas area.

This kind of omission we should enjoy.

The Small Car....

It is odd to say, but gasoline dealers in a few months may be glad to see more small cars driven up to their pumps.

Word is that supplies of gasoline will be limited sometime in the next year, dealers at wholesale and retail going on a quota of the previous year's consumption.

But the prior year's quota is only the outside amount the dealer may receive from the producing company. He may get less. And the big gas-using cars may be driven fewer miles in the lack of gas or in view of much higher prices at the pump.

Some suggest all the rationing has to do with the oil industry's rancor over a 5 percent cutback off of the depletion allowance, about a 25 percent reduction in oil exploration funding, in effect.

The U. S. gets oil from the Middle East by tanker, the U. S. by pipeline and truck, and eventually, when the ecologists' see their cars may be substituted by bicycles, from Alaska by pipeline.

Whichever, the small car will go further on less gas which will cost more. Who said the U. S. is not following Europe in much of its development and travail?

AAA Recommends Ways To Lower Gasoline Use

HOUSTON

Effortless ways for motorists to cut down on fuel consumption were recommended today by the American Automobile Association.

While AAA has stated that localized gasoline shortages should not measureably hamper spring and summer vacation travel, the 15-million member motoring federation said the following guidelines would benefit car owners and at the same time help relieve fuel pinches:

--Form car pools for office commuting.

--Combine short trips. When taking children to school, or picking up your spouse after work, take care of shopping errands on the same outing.

--If you're considering buying a second car, make it smaller. Vehicle weight has a great effect on gasoline consumption.

--Keep the car's engine in tune. Special attention should be given to fuel and air filters, plugs and points, and, in late model cars, emission control devices.

--Don't fill your fuel tank to the neck. Fuel can overflow while the car is in motion or when parked on an incline. Fuel also can expand and overflow in hot weather even if the car is parked on level ground, so instruct the service station attendant not to "top off the tank."

--Make certain tires are properly inflated. This also saves on tire wear. Add extra pounds of air when traveling with a full load, but do not exceed the maximum pressure listed on tire sidewalls.

--Drive at moderate speeds whenever possible. Gasoline mileage is greatly affected by speed.

--Avoid "jack rabbit" starts. Always accelerate gradually as though you had an egg between your foot and the accelerator.

--Drive at steady speeds whenever possible, as stop-and-go driving also increases fuel consumption. Anticipate traffic signals to minimize braking and acceleration.

--When entering a freeway, take full advantage of acceleration paths so that you can gradually reach highway speeds, rather than having to "floor board" the accelerator to reach cruising speed.

--Avoid accelerating hard when going up a hill; instead, build up adequate speed ahead of time.

--After starting a cold engine, don't use long warm-up periods; instead, drive slowly for a mile or so before reaching cruising speed.

--Don't allow the engine to idle for more than a minute while parked.

AAA says motorists planning vacations this summer should combine the applicable guidelines above with these tips:

--Cut down on use of the air-conditioner by beginning your travel day earlier in the morning and pulling off the road during the hottest hours.

--Try to travel lighter than normally. Excess weight puts additional strain on the engine and results in less miles per gallon of gasoline.

Lawmakers Move Slowly

By Bill Boykin

AUSTIN

Legislators have a lot more left to do than they have done so far in almost four months.

Of the nearly 1,700 House bills and almost 1,000 Senate bills introduced, fewer than 100 actually have reached the Governors desk.

If the 63rd Legislature accomplishes as much as the 62nd did numerically (more than 1,000 bills passed), about 99 per cent of the floor action must be capsuled in the brief period before the May 28 adjournment deadline.

Slow-moving debate in the House -- where more than 200 amendments were offered -- on the $9.7 billion appropriation bill fanned some speculation that a special session may be necessary to complete mandatory work.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who holds the key to calling such a session, has made clear he doesn't want one.

Senators banged through their $9.5 billion version of the state budget in an hour and 21 minutes.

In spite of the two weeks spent on the House spending bill, Speaker Price Daniel Jr. maintained "plenty of time" remains to consider other "must" legislation.

Daniel predicted House passage of these measures before May 28:

* Mass transit.
* Drug law reform.
* Bills to improve fiscal responsibility in government appropriations.
* Restoral of capital punishment.
* Penal code revision.
* Water district reform.
* Public school finance.
* Competitive insurance rating.

While the work load appears staggering, Texas legislators are used to concentrating most of their floor action in the last month of their sessions.

CONSTITUTION -- The Constitutional Revision Commission began the first of its three-months' series of hearings in the Panhandle and Far West Texas.

Initial hearings were held in Amarillo, Lubbock, El Paso, Midland-Odessa and San Angelo before moving South to San Antonio. A total of 18 hearings will hear citizens' views on how the constitution should be revised.

Witnesses offered suggestions on everything from dipping cattle in cold weather to legislative pay and the rights of individual citizens. Some told the Commission it should move cautiously in changing the constitution.

Further hearings are slated at Arlington, Texarkana, Tyler, Lufkin-Nacogdoches, Houston, Laredo, Corpus Christi, McAllen, Beaumont Pt. Arthur-Orange, Abilene, Wichita Falls, Waco and Austin between now and the end of June.

FEE, JURY BILLS - Higher hunting and fishing license fees and loer age limits for jury service are virtually assured.

The Senate passed amended bills authorizing both and returned them to the House where they originated.

The hunting license will cost $5.25 instead of $3.35 and the fishing license $4.35 instead of $2.15. A combination license is available for $8.75. Out of state hunters visiting Texas may pay $37.50 for their licenses. A special, three-day, nonresident salt fishing license can be obtained for $1.25.

Under the new juror age legislation, 18-20-year-olds can serve on any Texas state court trial jury.

A bill to provide full maturity rights to the 18-20-year-olds finally passed the Senate and went to the House.

Drug Smugglers Use Odd Carriers

By Jane Braga

RIO DE JANERIO

Reuter -- Brazilian customs men are eyeing brassieres and boa constrictors with suspicion these days.

They are among unlikely receptacles which drug smugglers have been using to bring narcotics into this vast South American nation. The drug L.S.D. is sometimes imported from the United States in ladies underwear, said a state narcotics agent, Prof. Luiz Porto.

The undies are permeated with the acid which is first mixed with distilled water, then dried out and shipped to Brazil.

Brazilian distributors reverse the process on receipt of the goods, and obtain 50 to 100 microgrammes of L. S. D. per garment.

Porto said a boa constrictor recently shipped to Brazil fror Per u was held by custo s officials at the border.

Examination revealed that the intestines of the writhing merchandise contained tubes of morphine and cocaine.

Porto, who is a member of the State Narcotics Commission, also holds the chair of pharmacology in Recife University.

Recife, a northeaster port, apart from being an entry point for L. S. D., is a major exit for shipments of marijuana to the United States, he said.

In Recife itself, a sprawling metropolis surrounded by swamplands slums, one in every 13 people consumes drugs for kicks, he said. The marijuana exported to the U. S. is all grown in the state of Pernambuco, of which Recife is the chief city.

But cocaine and morphine, which also leave for North America via Recife, originate from neighboring Peru, Uruguay and Argentina, he said.

Some of the U. S. - Bound traffic goes first to Mexico, where it is transferred to helicopters for sneaking over the border to its final destination.

Porto said his findings had been confirmed by the U. S. Embassy in Brazil and the Department of Health of Maryland.

In the fight against the growing use of drugs, international cooperation is becoming more and more the accepted means of cutting off supplies.

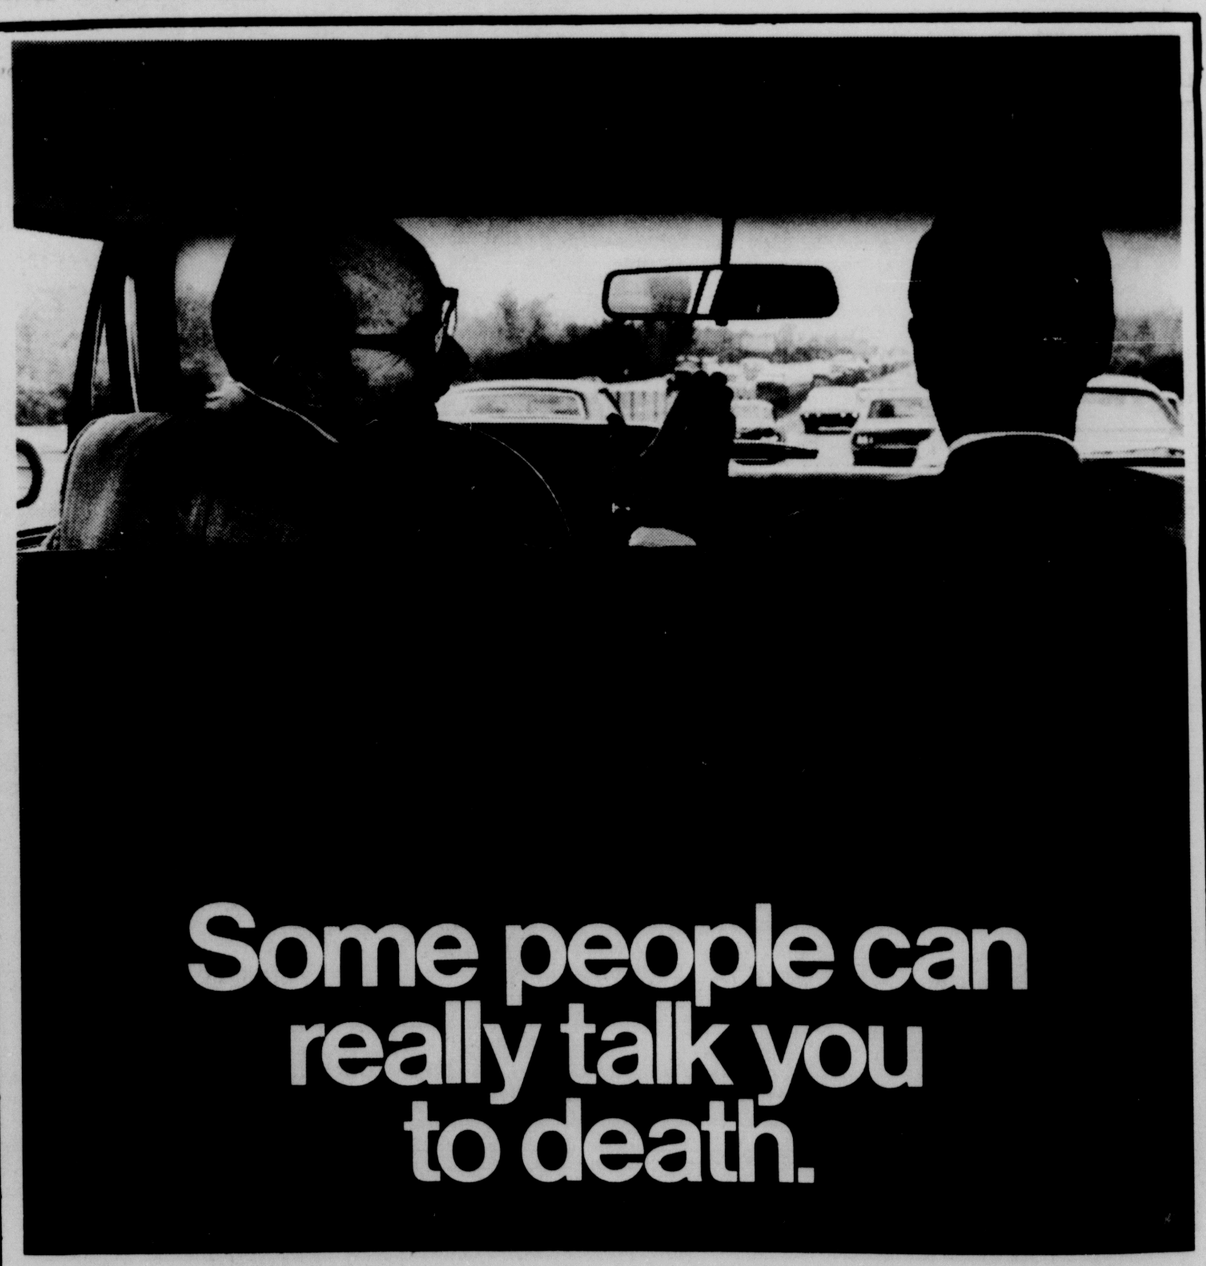
It was such cooperation --between American, Argentinian and Brazilian narcotics agents -- which resulted in the biggest drugs haul ever pulled off in Latin America, last September. covered 13 pounds of pure heroin worth 45 million dollars aboard a U. S. freighter in Rio harbor after a tip-off from a man in Buenos Aires that the ship Mormacaltair was carrying "extra weight."

A further blow was delivered when a "Brazilian Connection" wws broken a month later.

A joint U. S. and Brazilian investigation turned up a smuggling ring headed by former Sicilian Mafia leader Tommasco Buscetta, including his son and six Frenchmen alleged to belong to the Corscian Mafia, as well as five Brazilians.

FLOWING GLACIERS

In Greenland, vast streams of ice, or glaciers, flow continually toward the sea at speeds of one ~~inch~~ to 100 feet per day, the National Geographic Society says.



Drivers who insist on facing their audience while they talk—instead of the road ahead—can be deadly bores. Even their funny stories can turn tragic in a hurry. A punch line can be killed instantly by a car that stops suddenly, an intersection, a curve in the road. By anything that gets in the way.

No one is safe with drivers like this. Neither passengers or people in other cars...nor pedestrians. If you know someone who has this deadly habit, think about the consequences.

Straighten him out or refuse to ride with him.

Your new car dealer wants to see our highways safe. And more important, he wants to see you safe, whether you're behind the wheel or just a passenger.

So join the battle against careless talkers. Help them face their tremendous responsibilities—and the road ahead—and all their stories will wind up with a happy ending.

GERALD JOHNSON

BELLEVILLE, Ill.

U. S. Air Force Technical Sergeant Gerald Johnson, whose wife, Jewel, is the daughter of Mrs. Ruby Banks, Thorndale, has received his second award of the Distinguished Flying Cross (DFC) and his seventh and eighth awards of the Air Medal for aerial achievement in Southeast Asia.

Sergeant Johnson earned the medals as a flight mechanic aboard a CH-53C helicopter. His DFC was for his participation in a formation of eight helicopters assigned to move a large contingent of allied soldiers into an area of operations deep in enemy territory.

Despite the threat of antiaricraft fire and a large number of enemy forces in the area of the landing zone, he and his crew made numerous landings to off-load the troops thus making possible the start of a new allied offensive in a vital area.

The sergeant's Air Medals were for sustained aerial flights during the period February 1972 to August 1972.

He was honored in ceremonies at Scott AFB, Ill., where he now serves with the Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Service which performs mercy air rescue and evacuation.

Sergeant Johnson is a 1954 graduate of Peabody High School, Eastman, Ga.

UN Plans Sea Law Conference

By Anthony Goodman
Reuter Correspondent

UNITED NATIONS

The United Nations, which has trouble enough trying to keep peace on dry land, is about to embark on an ambitious plan to extend the rule of law to the remaining 70 percent of the globe comprising the seas and oceans.

Preparations begun more than two years ago are now well under way for a law of the sea conference due to open in New York next November.

It will attempt to draft a body of law regulating virtually all human activity on and under the water, from fishing to oil prospecting and from the passage of nuclear submarines through international straits to the recovery of sunken archeological treasures.

After an initial two-week organizational session here, the conference will get down to substantive work in Santiago De Chile next April and May.

It will be third U. N. conference on this subject, but far more ambitious than the previous gatherings, held in Geneva in 1958 and 1960.

One major difference is that the 132 member world organization has grown larger since then with the birth of more than 40 new independent nations.

Because of the complexity of its work, the law of the sea conference may well continue into 1975 with an additional session in Vienna.

Preparations are being carried out by the U. N. committee on the peaceful uses of the sea-bed and the ocean floor beyond the limits of national jurisdiction.

This body, called "The Sea-Bed Committee" for short, was set up in 1968 and includes representatives of 91 nations.

It has just finished a five-week session at U. N. headquarters and is to complete its work in Geneva during the summer, aiming to narrow the differences among delegations as far as possible prior to the start of the conference.

According to the chairman of the committee, Ambassador Hamilton S. Amerasinghe of Sri Lanka (Ceylon), an agreement of sorts may be in sight on one basic question - the breadth of a coastal states territorial waters.

He said: "There could be almost complete unanimity that it should not exceed 12 nautical miles, provided that a concept of an economic zone, where the coastal state would exercise exclusive rights, is also accepted."

But some states, including most Latin American countries, want an economic zone extending as far as 200 miles from the coast while other nations, among them the large maritime powers, completely oppose this idea.

Because the topics to be tackled by the conference affect such vital concerns as national defence and economic development, the preparatory sessions have inevitably mirrored existing tensions and rivalries.

China, which was particularly outspoken during the recent meetings, called the Soviet Union an "avaricious plunderer of the fishery resources of the world."

It accused both Russia and the United States of using marine research "as a means of realizing their economic plunder and military aggression."

China also hit out at a U.S. proposal for the immediate, provisional implementation of regulations covering deep sea mineral exploitation as soon as a treaty is signed, without waiting for completion of the lengthy ratification process.

The U. S. argues that sea-bed mining technology has advanced to the point where commercial recovery of manganese nodules - mineral - bearing rocks - can begin within a few years.

These nodules, about the size of an orange, are rich in cobalt, nickel, copper and managanese. They cover huge areas of the seabed, and private corporations in serval nations, including the U. S., are preparing to mine and process them.

One of the purposes of a body of law governing use of the sea beyond national jurisdiction is to lay down rules covering economic exploitation, Should it be done by an international authority, for example, or by individual countries under a licensing arrangement, or even by private companies?

The conference will have to deal with a host of more obscure, but equally important, legal issues such as those affecting land-locked states and nations consisting of archipelagos.

Workshop For Gardeners Built Easily Along House

Gardening, to those who attack it with a fervor, means having something growing all the time, and this calls for a comfortable work area available all seasons of the year.

Granted, even the most devout green-thumber won't linger out for long on frigid days, but even then a sheltered counter serves well for quick repotting of house plants.

A semi-enclosed structure allows the serious gardener to work late into the fall and be outside before the first blooms of spring.

Little Space Needed

Almost every house has a wall, a jog or a garage where a lean-to shelter can be added. A breezeway between house and detached garage is a natural area to enclose for garden work and storage.

Simple post and beam construction requires few tools and skills for erecting a garden workshop, and it needn't be large. Translucent plastic roofing admits extra light and one or two walls of horizontal wood slats allow free air circulation.

Posts of 4x4-inch Douglas fir or western cedar can be set in the ground or on concrete footings. Parts of the posts that will be in and near the ground should be preservative-treated.

Cleaning Made Easy

Counters are built onto the posts, using slightly spaced 2x4s for work surfaces. Flooring is wood decking of 2x4-inch fir for easy cleaning, or stepping-stones in a bed of river gravel.

Storage is built in under the counters and a cabinet with lock may be mounted on the wall, for storing sprays and chemicals.

Locating the structure on a water line allows easy installation of a deep tub sink, invaluable to a serious gardener.

If the garden house is near the back door, it also can serve as a mud room where children can clean up before entering the house.

Sixty million acres of privately owned tree farm lands are open for free public recreation.

Notaries Public Must File Oath

Secretary of State Mark W. White, Jr. announced that all presently commissioned Notaries Public desiring reappointment for the new term which begins June 1, 1973 and ends June 1, 1975, must pay the required fee and file a new oath and bond with the County Clerk between May 1, 1973 and May 15, 1973, inclusive.

White further stated that any person not now a Notary Public who desires appointment for the beginning of the new term on June 1, 1973, should apply to the County Clerk before May 14, 1973. The required application forms may be obtained from the County Clerk.

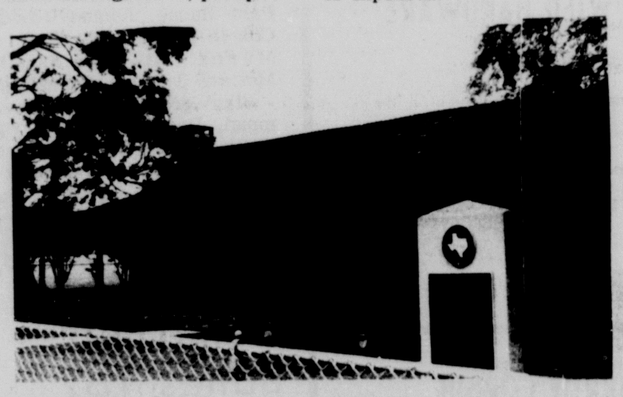
New Historical Sites Listed

Twelve sites in Texas have been added to the National Register of Historic Places. In San Antonio; King William Historic District, La Villita Historic District, Mission San Francisco de la Espada, and Mission San Juan Capistrano.

Also, Garcia Pasture Site (Archeological Site 41 CF 8), Cameron County; Hart's Mill Site and Old Fort Bliss (1878-93) El Paso; Ursuline Convent, Galveston; Fort Duncan, Eagle Pass; Landmark Inn Complex, Castroville; Rocky Dell (Archeological Site 41 OL 4), Oldham County; Hardeman House, Austin; and W. W. Browning House, Chappell Hill.

A booklet to be entitled The National Register in Texas, 1968-1971, is currently in preparation by the Historical Survey Committee. It will contain a description of each property placed on the Register from 1968 through 1971, plus photographs of many of the buildings and archeological sites.

A summer publication date is expected.



THIS YEAR marks the tenth birthday of the Texas Historical Building Medallion, which is awarded by the Historical Survey Committee to structures prominent in the history of Texas. The Eggleston House in Gonzales, pictured above, received Medallion No. 1 in 1962. It is the oldest structure in Gonzales, and one of the oldest in Texas.

THE VANCE HOUSE, part of the Landmark Inn complex in the Alsacian village of Castroville, was recently added to the National Register of Historic Places. The cut stone, stuccoed structure was built by innkeeper John Vance about the 1850's.

RURAL ELECTRIC QUIZ No. 1

TRUE	FALSE
☐	☐	There are nearly 1,000 rural electric systems, serving in 46 states.
☐	☐	Rural electric systems serve nearly 25,000,000 people.
☐	☐	Nationwide, rural electric systems average 3.9 consumers per mile of line.
☐	☐	Rural electric systems own and maintain nearly half the power lines in the nation, to serve their consumers.
☐	☐	Rural electric systems own a little over one per cent of the nation's generating capacity.

If you answered TRUE to all these statements, you're right up to date on rural electric facts.

These facts, plus many more, add up to a POWERful countrywide group of individual systems with a common purpose . . . helping strengthen rural America through service to their rural areas.

Support rural electrification; write your Congressman and Senators a brief note, urging them to continue supporting a strong, effective rural electrification program.

Elm Creek Farm Joins In Major Study Project

COLLEGE STATION

The Elm Creek Farm of Cameron is among 50 cattle and dairy operations cooperating with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in a major project to study hybrid vigor effects on total efficiency of beef production.

About 2,700 cows are being provided by stockmen in Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma. The farm is managed by Bill Harris and has 48 Holsteins in the program.

Most of the research is underway at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research Center near McGregor. Experiment Station personnel involved are Dr. H. A. Fitzhugh, Dr. R. C. Thomas, Dr. T. C. Cartwright, Dr. W. C. Ellis, Dr. Z. L. Carpenter, Dr. G. C. Smith, Dr. A. M. Sorensen and Dr. O. D. Butler.

Fitzhugh and Thomas said the research in its early stages required that about 550 cows each from Angus, Brahman, Hereford, Holstein and Jersey breeds be artificially inseminated by bulls of the same five breeds. Calves from the matings (both the five straightbred types and the 20 reciprocal crossbred calves) will be used in experiments to gauge effects of hybred vigor on beef production efficiency.

Male calves from the matings will be fed and slaughtered to measure genetic differences in growth rate, feed efficiency, body composition and carcass merit. Females will be grown out to form a breeding herd in which genetic variation in calving ease, milk yield, maternal behavior, fertility and longevity will be recorded.

These "dam lines" will be mated to "long sire lines," such as Brown Swiss, Charolais, Chianina, Santa Gertrudis and Simmental, to evaluate the potential of specialized sire and dam line combinations; Fitzhugh pointed out.

He said the 2,700 cows provided by the cattlemen are the foundation of the experimental herd. Fifty-five different herds of cattle were sampled to build an experimental herd which would be widely representative of the beef cattle population now available to commercial producers.

Twenty - five different bulls were used from each of the five breeds in the original matings. The scientist said artificial insemination was necessary so that the same bulls could be mated to all five cow breeds. Matings were during the first half of 1972.

Fitzhugh expects about 1,500 calves from the matings, and many of the calves have already been born. They are delivered to the Experiment Station at McGregor at about three months of age.

Delivery at this early age, Fitzhugh explained, insures they will have all been maintained in a similar environment for most of their productive lives.

Tomb Robbers Ruin Sites Of Etruscan Civilization

By Peter Kayser

CERVETERI, Italy

Reuter -- With the advent of spring and tourists, tomb robbing and antique faking are getting into full swing again in this center of the ancient Etruscan civilization.

Tomb robbers -- or tombaroli -- cheerfully admit that in this area of central Italy alone their turnover from loot sold to dealers runs at between 300 and 400 million lire (537,500 and 712,500 dollars) a year. Most of the loot ends abroad, usually via Switzerland.

Equally flourishing, and less tiring, is simply faking Etruscan pots and then selling them off to unsuspecting tourists or amateur archeologists as the real thing.

The total annual turnover from the fake market is estimated to run into several million dollars.

The centuries old art of tomb robbing came into the limelight when the New York Times charged earlier this year that a 2,500 - year - old Greek vase bought by the Metropolitan Museum for $1,000,000 dug up in 1971 by tomb robbers from an Etruscan grave near here.

The huge vase, or calyx krater, is generally considered the best Greek vase in existence. It was of such high quality that the painter Euphronics and the potter Euxitheos proudly signed their names on the front.

The Metropolitan's version is that the vase, used for mixing wine and water, came from a Lebanese collector but Italian police have since charged that it was stolen near here.

The battle against fakers and tomb robbers is waged erratically by customs police, carabinieri, state security police and a dozen men from the superintendency for southern Etruria.

Fakers are particularly difficult to run down. First, some fakes are so perfect as to defy even expert detection. Second, even if a buyer does discover he has been cheated he is unlikely to tell the police since he was breaking the law by buying the "antique" in the first place.

Some fakes are made up of genuine fragments, augmented by imitation pieces. A more popular method, however, is to decorate a genuine earthenware Etruscan vase of little value and then sell it off as a priceless archaeological find.

The Etruscans, Europe's earliest civilization, flourished in central Italy between the ninth and third century B. C. They were a great trading nation and artistically gifted as the paintings on their tombs still show today.

They were also inordinately fond of painted Greek vases which they not only imported in large quantities but also copied.

Etruscan tombs were usually filled with the dead man's most treasured possessions -- jewelry, drinking cups and the precious Greek vases, all of which have since been systemically plundered, first by the Romans, Then by barbarians and finally by 20th century tomb robbers.

Customs police in Cerveteri believe that at least 300 tomb robbers operate in the city itself and a further 600 in the surrounding area. Since 1969, they have sent 300 cases of tomb robbing up for judgment but so far only 16 people have ended up in jail.

During the same period, Cerveteri customs police say they have recovered about $537,500 worth of stolen pieces. But they stress this is only a fraction of what has actually been ransacked from the tombs.

Memories Of Hitler Emerge In Interviews For Book

By Bernard Melunsky

BONN

Reuter -- "I included Adolf Hitler in my prayers, even though I listened to the British Broadcasting Corporation under the bedclothes."

This private memory by a German who was 18 years old at the end of World War II conveys as much about life under the Nazi dictatorship as many lengthy studies.

It is one of 500 personal views of the dictator contained in a book just published here -- "Did You See Hitler? Germans Answer."

Together they help to build a picture of Hitler as seen by ordinary subjects of the German Third Reich which lasted for 12 brutal years from the time the Nazi party came to power in 1933 .

One woman recalled that as a teenager she once saw Hitler and noted in her diary: "This is the most beautiful day of my life."

Another person interviewed remembered a woman who had once shaken the Fuehrer's (leader's) hand and refused to wash it for days.

Memories of Hitler's personal appearance were largely unflattering, typified by a woman who said he had "frightfully insignificant face", though another talked of his "unprecedented charisma, a demonic power." Someone else said he looked "as rosy as a marzipan piglet."

The book compiled by author Walter Kempowski, who interviewed some 500 people from all walks of life during research for a novel. He later decided the interviews were so interesting that they merited a book in themselves.

They form part of what the weekly magazine Der Spiegel described as an unprecedented post-war flood of new Hitler material rolling over the West German public.

Coinciding with the 40th anniversary of the Nazis coming to power are new books, films, television plays and documentaries about the Fuehrer and his times -- many of them neither produced nor written by Germans.

Der Spiegel itself is publishing a series about Hitler's youth, containing hitherto unpublished details of the dictator's early formative years.

The Kempowski collection of interviews approaches the subject from a totally different point of view, and is especially intriguing where personal responses to mass hysteria are revealed.

"The reason I rejected Adolf is connected with my father," one man said. "My father always had a small mustache. I rejected him during my puberty. And then I rejected Adolf with his mustache."

Another quoted the case of an uncle who had always been a strong opponent of Hitler, but turned into a fanatical supporter of the dictator "because in the stadium where Hitler was speaking the sun suddenly broke through the clouds."

Changes In Store For East End

By Peter Calvert
Reuter Correspondent

LONDON

Reuter -- One of Europe's most famous and colorful communities -- Londons East End -- is in the midst of deep and sometimes painful changes that will bring it a new character.

And the East Enders are arguing with characteristic energy over what kind of identity the area will have when the process is finally completed.

The East End, centered on a gargantuan system of enclosed docks, was traditionally one of Britain's roughest, poorest, liveliest and most- warm-hearted communities.

The bustling dockland was at the heart of the imperial and commercial life of this trading nation for some 150 years. It absorbed immigrants from all over the world. It survived some of Britain's worst hunger and distress, and the World War II blitz in which the area was a prime target for German air raids.

But technological change has caught up with the docks, and forced a move 25 miles toward the mouth of the Thames River, to the container depots at Tilbury.

The loss of dockyard employment was the ultimate blow for an area that already had more than its share of problems.

As waterside inns closed one by one, and people moved away, the British government acted to lift the region from its grime and poverty.

In May, 1971, the government formed a study group to work out a development plan aimed at seizing the unique opportunity provided by the tracts of now-unused dockland -- all well within London's boundaries and becoming more valuable day by day as land prices in the capital rocket upward.

All three docks nearest the city center, the Saint Katherines, the London and the Surrey, had already closed when the study group began working.

After nearly two years, the study team has now proposed a series of possibilities, producing reactions ranging from delight to fury -- and some mystification -- among East Enders.

There are proposals for many of the old dock sites to be filled in, and massive housing development for the area, which now has a population of 55,000 in the 22 square miles to be rebuilt.

Six new bridges over the Thames where there were none before, a polytechnic college on the site of an old dock, boating marianas and pleasure parks, new school and offices -- all are possibilities suggested by the planners.

East Enders are being asked, in a giant consultation program , to help choose the best elements of five alternative development schemes. Long-range cost of the redevelopment is estimated at around four billion dollars.

Belly Dancing Offered In Rome

By Christopher Matthews

ROME

Reuter -- Sandi Robinson, a blonde ex-pharmacist from Houston, wants to teach the women of Rome how to belly-dance.

She recently put the following advertisement into a local paper:

"Girls . . . days monotonous? Boyfriends lukewarm? Marriage on the skids? Try belly-dancing.

"Snap him to the relization that you're still the sexiest feline in his life. Great fun, makes you feel fantastic, improves confidence, slims at the same time."

A number of prospective pupils applied. The first was an Egyptian.

Sandi, who gave up pharmacy five years ago to work her passage aboard a Greek cargo ship bound for Piraeus, was making a living as a clothes designer until she visited Lebanon last year.

Then she decided to become a belly dancing instructor.

What decided her was Nadia Djemal, star attraction at the Phoenicia Hotel, Beirut. A regular customer there has been watching Nadia perform three times a week for the last ~~he~~ years.

Sandi has reached a stage in life where it is more tactful not to inquire about her age. And she is just the right side of plump.

Dressed in breeches, knee boots and with a chain belt slung across her hips, she demonstrates the basic steps of belly dancing in her apartment off the Via Veneto.

Belly dancing apparently started as a religious rite in Lebanese or Persian temples but the gods were not the only ones who looked kindly on it. It soon evolved as an entertainment for eastern potentates.

Belly-dancing, any kind of Sandi believes. "It is the only socially acceptable form of flirtation."

A professional dancer with a music-hall at the age of four, Sandi recently took a two and a half month course in Beirut, studying four hours every day. Her instructor, a man, also taught at a military academy and at a local mental hospital.

At the moment, Sandi's main problem is that local labor regulations specify that foreigners can only have jobs which no Italian can do.

But she should be all right. "As far as I know, I'm the only belly-dancing instructor in Europe."

False Tax Returns Net Eight Counts

B. C. Gillon of Temple pleaded not guilty to eight counts of income tax law violations. Gillon entered his plea when he was arraigned before Federal Judge Jack Roberts in U. S. District Court in Austin.

Gillon had previously been charged by a Federal Grand Jury in Austin on March 29, 1973 with aiding and assisting in the preparation of eight false income tax returns for seven taxpayers living in the Temple area. The indictment charges that Gillon prepared false income tax returns for each of these clients by wilfully overstating and/or falsifying his clients' itemized deductions.

According to R. L. Phinney, District Director of Internal Revenue for southern Texas, Gillon was one of 21 return preparers who were arrested in the Austin District during the 1973 filing season charged with preparing false income tax returns.

Phinney said these arrests were a continuation of a program started in 1972 aimed at putting the preparers of false income tax returns out of business.

Since April 15, 1972, eleven tax practititioners have en tax practitioners have been convicted of preparing false returns in the Austin District and have received prison sentences ranging from probation to nine years.

Phinney said that a person convicted of preparing false income tax returns for his clients is subject to imprisonment for three years or a fine of $5,000, or both, for each such return filed with the Internal Revenue Service.

Trial of Gillon will be scheduled at a later date.

Lions Clubs Achieve One Million Members

OAK BROOK, ILLINOIS — Bernard A. "Barney" Gill (left), of Virginia Beach, Va., has been recognized as the one millionth member of the International Association of Lions Clubs, according to Lions President George Friedrichs, Annecy, France. Lions International is the world's largest service organization with more than 26,000 clubs in 148 countries and geographical territories around the world. It is the first service association to reach one million members. In special ceremonies conducted at the Association's Oak Brook, Ill., headquarters, Gill received a special plaque from Phil W. Sterker, of Basalt, Colo., Chairman of the Membership Club Service Committee of the International Board of Directors.

Gill, 45, a retired Army Lieutenant Colonel and Viet Nam veteran, is Executive Director of the United Drug Abuse Council, Inc., a planning and coordinating agency for all drug related problems in the Tidewater region of Virginia. He resides in Virginia Beach with his wife, Nancy, and their five children, and is a member of the Virginia Beach Oceana Lions Club.

Gimmmick Used To Sell Real Estate

AUSTIN

A desire for relief from the 8 - to - 5 treadmill and the humdrum of daily life, heightened by a nationwide fear of population explosion, is causing many Texans to join the "Great American Land Rush."

Aware that most of us inherited our pioneer ancestors' dream of a plot of land to call our own, where the grass is greener and the air is sweeter, many legitimate developers have had the vision to prepare places where those dreams can be purchased with a down payment. Texas can be proud of the many fine developers in this state who are providing for the increased recreational needs of our citizens with real quality developments tailored to fit a variety of desires and pocketbooks.

But there also are unscrupulous speculators who are advertising the stuff dreams are made of, without any intention of backing up their claims.

They flood the mails, and tie up telephone lines, and some disappointed consumers have registered complaints about them with the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division.

One abuse which has caused this office to take action is the "free vacation" gimmick in which prospects were offered free "vacations" in return for visiting a project, but later discovered that they had to travel at their own expense buy their own meals, and had nothing to see but a bare lot.

That comes under the heading of false and misleading advertising and some speculators have been obliged through court - approved voluntary compliance agreements to stop that practice.

Recently, my staff gained a permanent injunction against one entrepeneur who attempted to lure people to a lake "development" by the use of highly deceptive advertising. The developer was ordered by the district court to cease making these fraudulent claims.

Too often, consumers do not complain -- because they do not know they can, or they are ashamed to admit they took the bait.

Did you ever receive one of those mailings which include a $500 "check," advising you that if your bring the "check" with you, it will reduce the lot price by that amount?

It is not uncommon for valid developers to sell their lots at a lower price, so they can acquire more capital for improvements. But no sensible businessman is going to mark his property down to less than it is worth, and buyers who carry the $500 "check" can find out too late that the property was worth $500 less than the advertised amount all along.

TSTI Sets Registration

Registration for the summer trimester at the James Connally Campus of the Texas State Technical Institute will be held Monday, April 30 and Tuesday, May 1.

Pre-registration for most returning students has already been conducted but however those returning students who did not pre-register are asked to report on either April 30 or May 1.

All registration procedures are being held in building 39-3 on the southeast part of the campus from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Robert Whately, manager of admissions and records, said that all returning students are asked to report on one of the two days to pay their fees. New students will also register at the same location.

Classes on the James Connally Campus for State Tech begin on Wednesday, May 2nd at 8:00 a.m.

Young Men Must Still Register

Colonel Melvin N. Glantz, the State Director of Selective Service for Texas, has issued a statement reminding young men of their responsibility under Federal Law to register with Selective Service.

"The recent nationwide announcement that the draft has ended has misled some of our young men into thinking they no longer are required by law to register with Selective Service. This is incorrect!", Glantz said.

The State Director pointed out the fact that Selective Service is being reorganized into a stand-by operation to keep draft machinery operative and ready in case of a national emergency that requires the drafting of young men again in the future. He pointed out that although inductions have ended -- the Selective Service System continues to operate and the law continues to require each young man to register with Selective Service within 30 days before or after his 18th birthday.

Failure to register makes a young man subject to prosecution under Federal Law with a severe penalty upon conviction.

During the reorganization of the System into a stand-by basis, registration may be completed at any one of the 63 Selective Service System Area Offices that will remain open in Texas -- or at points in every Texas County where volunteer workers will assist the young man in the simple steps of registration.

The registrars for Local Board No 92 in this area are: Mr. Henry J. Litzman, Postoffice, Cameron, John D. Yoakum, Milano, Floyd Stark, Buckholts and Mr. Walter G. Marek, Burlington.
